A Year of Seasons

STORY SPRINTERS®

In January, it is winter. The sky is gray, and the air is cold. It can snow a lot in January. People wear warm coats and hats. They build snowmen and go ice skating.

Check your understanding:

Remember to write in complete sentences.

1. What months belong to winter and spring?

2. What months belong to summer and fall?

3. What are some things you can do in winter, not in fall?

4. What are some things you can do in spring, not in summer?

5. What is your favorite season? Why?

Throughout the year, the weather changes, holidays are celebrated, and the seasons come and go. It's always an adventure to experience the differences each season brings.

In February, it is still winter. Snow is still on the ground, but sometimes the sun shines. People drink hot chocolate and watch movies by the fire.

The weather starts to change in March. It's still cold, but sometimes it rains. The flowers begin to bloom, and the trees get new leaves.

In December, it is winter again. The air is cold, and it sometimes snows. People celebrate the holidays with their families and exchange gifts. Excitement can be felt as the world prepares to ring in the new year.

Autumn is still in full swing in November. The days get shorter, and it rains more. People stay indoors, drink hot tea, and read books. Some people celebrate Thanksgiving with lots of food and family gatherings.

In April, it's finally spring. The weather gets warmer, and the sun shines more. People go outside to enjoy the sunshine and the fresh air. They have picnics and fly kites.

It's still spring in May.
The flowers are in full bloom, and birds sing in the trees. People go for walks in the park and take photos of the beautiful nature.

In October, it is still autumn. The leaves have fully changed and begin to fall from the trees, and the air is crisp. People go to pumpkin patches to pick a pumpkin to carve and then they dress up for Halloween.

As summer turns to autumn in September, the weather starts to cool down, and the leaves on the trees begin to change color. People go apple picking and drink warm cider.

In June, it's the beginning of summer. The sun shines brightly, and it gets very warm. People go to the beach, swim in the sea, and have barbecues.

July is usually the hottest month of the year in summer. The weather is hot, and the days are long. People go on vacation, visit new places, and have fun in the sun.

Summer is winding down in August. The days are hot, and sometimes there are thunderstorms. People enjoy the warm evenings and watch the lightning in the sky.
